

In June 2008, World Vision launched a major initiative to reduce the illness and death caused by malaria. World Vision aims to contribute to a 75 percent reduction in malaria cases, with the end goal of nearly zero preventable malaria deaths by 2015.

This initiative aims at expanding and enhancing WV's existing anti-malaria programs. World Vision works in 62 malaria-endemic countries, 23 of which are in sub-Saharan Africa, and has long experience in providing malaria prevention and treatment solutions in local communities.

To strategically address this threat, World Vision is scaling up our malaria prevention and treatment efforts.

No single response can defeat malaria. World Vision is a part of a growing global movement to combat malaria with strong coordination between governments, businesses, non-governmental organizations, local citizens, and supporters like you.
