

United Nations Security Council Resolutions and every major report on the subject has identified the need for regular reporting and stronger action to protect children caught in today's wars.

Watchlist country reports detail all factors related to the impact or threat of armed conflict on children including adolescents. They combine information from various sources and analysis from child rights experts and make recommendations for action. The Watchlist operates within the framework of the universal human rights principles.

You can contribute and take part in the efforts of Watchlist by

- providing information to the Watchlist on your country,
- using the Watchlist in your work advocating for children affected by war,
- recommending the Watchlist to those who work with children.