

The Global Campaign for Climate Action (GCCA) is a bold, new initiative involving a growing number of national and global organizations in support of a single goal: to mobilize civil society and to galvanize public opinion in support of transformational change and rapid action to save the planet from dangerous levels of climate change.

Global Campaign for Climate Action has put together TckTckTck, an unprecedented global alliance of civil society organizations, trade unions, faith groups and people, all calling for a fair, ambitious, and binding climate change agreement.

We are at a crisis moment, with two pathways before us. A fair, ambitious and binding treaty will open up a bright, green world of prosperity, health, and stability; a weak or failed one will lead us into a future of escalating climate impacts and tremendous uncertainty.

This is where you come in. TckTckTck is assembling the largest collection of voices ever created, a deep and diverse group of people from all walks of life. If enough of us tell our leaders—loudly enough—that we want action, our governments will be forced to take it. This is our best shot. But it won't happen without you, and time is running out.
