

1st June 2011 - The Put Yourself in My Shoes exhibit will be visiting the Spanish city of Zaragoza this month. Led by World Vision Spain, the exhibit will be visiting primary schools and a shopping mall in the city to collect children's messages to the Spanish President to commit to child rights.

The exhibit has already been shown in Barcelona, where over 400 children participated in the "footprint workshop", cutting out a shoe-shaped card and leaving a colourful and creative message to the Spanish President asking for his support in achieving greater commitment to child rights.

Put Yourself in My Shoes is an awareness-raising campaign that aims at galvanizing public opinion to demand stronger political commitment to child rights.

The exhibit will be in Zaragoza from June 1st to 19th and it will be shown at Puerta Cinegia shopping mall on June 4th and 11th.
